

When Zephyr Saved The World

Zephyr was a young, intelligent girl, who liked to learn about the planet. Not many people knew that Zephyr had superpowers. They were flying through the sky and summoning the wind.

On one cold Friday afternoon, when Zephyr was watching the news with her parents, the woman on the TV was talking about climate change. The polar bears in Antarctica were losing their home as the ice was melting.

“I need to help them!” Zephyr says as she thunders up the stairs and gets changed into her superhero outfit! She flings open her bedroom window and flies out into the starry sky.

It took no time at all to reach the cold Antarctica. When she got there, she met her good old friend, Peter the polar bear. Peter was shocked when he saw Zephyr. They talked about Peter’s home and climate change. They finally came to the conclusion to fly around the world and warn people about climate change and what to do to help.

People loved seeing Zephyr and Peter and they began to listen to their advice. Lots more countries started using renewable energy, like wind turbines, and Peter’s home was saved! Go Zephyr!
